ABOUT THE INSTITUTE

C.K Pithawalla Institute of Pharmaceutical Science & Research was founded in 2005 and is being managed by the Navyug Vidyabhavan Trust which was founded in February, 1965.

Within a short span of its operation, the college has provided all the necessary facilities to help the students which includes a well-established library containing a large number of books, reference books, technical & general magazines.

Honorable late Shri C.K. Pithawalla has been the driving force for the setting up of this college named after him and is continually drawing inspiration from him. This institute of learning in particular, like many others, owes a great deal to his vision, understanding and missionary zeal right from its inception to its blossoming.

VISION OF THE INSTITUTE

Committed to promote high quality education, training and research in pharmacy to meet the needs of tomorrow's healthy society.

MISSION OF THE INSTITUTE

- To create an arena of the highest quality professional pharmacy education at all levels, to produce competent pharmacists with innovative skills
- To establish Continuing Professional Development (CPD) program in the institution for practicing professionals to undertake the national task of education and research.
- To strengthen the industry – institution interaction to explore, substantiate and integrate native medicinal knowledge with modern pharmaceutical technology.
- To create a model pharmacy in the institution to strengthen the relation between public and pharmacy. To provide excellent work environment and to promote technical Superiority.
- To collaborate with national and international organizations for Outstanding educational /services/ research programs.

DR. DHIREN P. SHAH

PRINCIPAL,

C.K. Pithawalla Institute of Pharmaceutical Science and Research, Surat

I feel happy to know that the College Magazine Committee is bringing out the students magazine 'GUNADHYA' which is in fact long awaited. As you know, the holistic development of the College students goes beyond classroom teaching or any structured/formal education system. Thus, any such attempt made to offer multi-pronged opportunities to its students and further helping them to grow and realize their true potential is always welcome. Our in house students Magazine 'GUNADHYA' provides a platform to students for their creativity, self-expression, learning experiences and even an identity they will be proud of through accepting the challenge of writing. Such an opportunity assumes importance in today's age of competition, in which the young generation seems to be caught up by the much attractive and addictive social media and networking. However, this cannot be a substitute for the human mind engrossed in thinking, exploring and constantly introspecting for the self, surroundings and the country. This magazine allows its readers to probe into and appreciate new voices, at times radical expressions and opinions of the budding poet, writers and essayists. All contributors and students deserve congratulations. I hope other students will also feel inspired and motivated to build up their writing and presenting skills. I look forward to all students reaching new heights in their respective fields and making our College a proud institution. I congratulate the entire Editorial team, for bringing together this edition of the magazine.

Best Wishes.

9. ADVANCES OF SCIENCE

Antibiotic resistance killed more people than malaria or AIDS

More than a million people died from antibiotic-resistant infections across the globe in 2019, hundreds of thousands more than malaria or HIV/AIDS, according to a new estimate.

Bacteria that are resistant to antibiotics are considered one of the biggest threats facing modern medicine. Overuse of such drugs has led to resistance becoming more widespread, raising the prospect that common infections such as sepsis and pneumonia will become harder to treat.

Mohsen Naghavi at the University of Washington in Seattle and his colleagues devised a model to estimate how many people died in 2019 from bacterial infections that could previously have been treated were it not for antimicrobial resistance (AMR). No such global survey has been conducted before.

The model was based on the medical records of 471 million people with antibiotic-resistant infections from 204 countries. The team scoured published studies and medical records to get as comprehensive a data set on AMR as possible. “For countries that had very little data, we calculated figures based on a regional pattern we developed,” says Naghavi.

The researchers found that about 1.3 million deaths could be directly attributed to AMR worldwide. They also found that a further 3.65 million deaths involved people who had diseases that showed some form of AMR. “We can’t say for certain that these deaths were due to antimicrobial resistance, but some may have been,” says Naghavi.

If both groups are included, it would make AMR the third leading cause of death globally in 2019 behind ischemic heart attacks and strokes. Even the more conservative estimate would mean that AMR killed more people that year than HIV/AIDS, which was responsible for 680,000 deaths, and malaria, which killed 627,000 people.

“The stark reality of these figures points to the critical and urgent need to increase resources for the basics of infection control. In many places, this means water, sanitation, hygiene,” says Clare Chandler at the London School of Hygiene & Tropical Medicine.

More than 70 per cent of deaths linked to AMR in the study were due to resistance to beta-lactam antibiotics such as penicillin. “We weren’t surprised by this because we know how much these drugs are prescribed in clinics,” says Naghavi.

The key to tackling antimicrobial resistance is multifaceted, says Naghavi. “Developed countries need to prescribe fewer antibiotics and develop more vaccines for infectious diseases,” he says. Giving livestock fewer antibiotics, ensuring better hygiene in hospitals and improving surveillance of antimicrobial resistance is also important, he adds.
